BOSTON HERESS BEATEN; DYING AT HOLLYWOOD

HUSBAND ACCUSED OF ATTACK

McCaskill, Big Game Hunter, Held by Hollywood Police After Liquor Party

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

Los Angeles, Jan. 1.—Officers of the Hollywood police station today began an investigation of circumstances which culminated in the arrest of Bruce McCaskill, big game hunter, charged with beating his wife with golf clubs.

McCaskill is in jail, his wife in the Hollywood Community Hospital suffering from wounds which physicians say may cause her death, and Robert Gollmer is out on bail as a material witness.

Mrs. McCaskill is said by the police to be the former Frances Sawyer of Boston, who inherited $100,000 from the estate of her father.

McCaskill, motion picture director and realty dealer, formerly lived in Fayetteville, N. C., the police say. He is a big man, weighing about 315 pounds, while his wife is five feet four inches tall and weighs 135 pounds.

SCANTILLY CLAD.

Police were called to the newly built home of McCaskill on Whittier Heights in Hollywood Sunday. Mrs. McCaskill, Sergeant Evans and Officer Uhlik said, was attacked only in a silk undergarment.

Her husband declared, they said, his wife had kissed Robert Gollmer and that he was going to kill her. Mrs. McCaskill was taken to the hospital and McCaskill and Gollmer to jail.

The McCaskill home, the police say, was in a state of disorder as the result of a drinking party. McCaskill had broken down a window.

POLITICAL UNREST IS GAINING IN INDIA

Calcutta, Jan. 1.—The International News Service—Political, unrest again is on the increase in India. It was shown by developments today. The National Indian Congress suspended for a time of nearly $1,000,000 and urged 10,000 workers to go on strike for a campaign of civil disobedience. The congress called upon the Calcutta committee to prevent exploitation of India during the New Year crisis.

1,000 KIDS GET FREE HOT DOGS

North End Vendor Sours Rain as He Stages His Annual Treat to Little Guests

As a dispenser of joy, Axel Bjorkland is the hot dog's boy now.

This is the unanimous opinion of the North End's youngsters. One thousand hot dogs today made the acquaintance of nearly one thousand North End youngsters, through his kindness.

"Hot Dog Axel," as he is affectionately known to his hundreds of friends, has made a custom of treating the North End kiddies on New Year's morning to hot dogs, mustard and pickles.

Hand-printed signs placed in conspicuous places announce the party long before New Year's morning arrives.

At headquarters, and elsewhere, streets today scores of children met, eagerly talking over the expected feast. Pain did not dampen their spirits. Some incredulous youngsters attending Axel's party for the first time were skeptical.

"Aw, he ain't got to come this mornin'. You're kiddin' us," said one. But Axel's old friends knew they could depend on him, rain or shine.

When he bore into sight, doubled up under the weight of his heavy bundles of frankfurts and rolls, he was mobbed by his little guests.

The hot-dog stand was quickly rigged up, and the party began, with Axel beaming with good cheer as he passed out endless yards of sausage. Hot dogs disappeared miraculously and the line was continually being renewed.

Mustered around little faces as they waited again and again, grinning and declaring: "We ain't had none before since last year, Axel."

"I got more fun out of the party than the kids do themselves," said Axel almost shyly after the rush had subsided and the tail of the long hot dog line disappeared between hungry mouths.

"Treated Me Cruelly and Abandoned Me," "Primitive" Wife Declares

"The Modern Adam" and "The Modern Eve," having unsuccessfully tried a return to the old-fashioned Garden of Eden, are going to try their luck in the modern divorce court, according to "Eve" herself.

"I am going to sue Carl for divorce the minute I reach Boston. It would take a whole day to write you all the things he has done to me. You have no idea how cruelly I have been treated, and he now has left me entirely."

"The Modern Eve" has written these words to her sister, Mrs. M. L. Loring of Dorchester. She is stranded in a little village in Maine where she has been the unwilling witness to "The Modern Adam."

RAVENS caused a panic in the December street station of the East Boston tunnel when an attempt was made to clear the way for a car. He was arrested by Special Officer Bennett and locked in Michael's Prison, 15 years old, of No. 34 Clark street, Boston.

Fifty-five arrests for intoxication were reported from the city police stations, outside of the local cases.

"HAPPY NEW YEAR." Prohibition Director Elmer C. Potter was asked today what would be done by his office in regard to the New Year drinking. He replied:

"I have received no reports yet, therefore cannot say what I shall do. As soon as the first force report I shall act. Happy New Year, to you."

The new year was welcomed with raised glasses, filled bottles and made the bottom of jars.

Prohibition agents at strategic points failed to dim the festive greeting to 1923. House was plentiful, not so in prohibition days. It is true, but enough to give the new year a cheerful welcome.

North End fun was about this year. Only four arrests were made for carrying loads of liquor against twenty-four last year for this offense.

The warning spread by the police of that section apparently had its effect in keeping the celebrants from resorting to gun-play to satisfy their emotions.

Those under arrest for shooting off revolvers were Giuseppe Testa, Margaret street, Nicola Marz, Nova place, Charles Zuffanti and Philip Masina, both of Charter street.

The "clatters" at the various town stations showed the following arrests for drunkenness:

HAPPY NEW YEAR! HOT DOGS!

AXEL BJORLAND, "HOT DOG MAN," AND LITTLE GUESTS

WAS A HAPPY NEW YEAR, indeed, for 1,000 North End children today when the popular "hot dog" vendor of that district held his annual "hot dog party" for his little friends. Axel BJORLAND, "hot dog man," was the star of the show. He had a big pile of hot dogs and was serving them to the children. The children were very happy and were eating the hot dogs with gusto. The party was a great success and the children had a wonderful time.

There were no arrests for carrying loads of liquor against twenty-four last year for this offense.

Whole Mince Pie for Each of 619 in State Prison

Indigestion will be in order at the State Prison today. Every one of the 619 prisoners was given a whole mince pie as the widow of a hearty New Year's dinner.

James Pomeroy, who celebrated his 41th New Year's Day at the prison, ate his pie and then volunteered to help out anyone who could not get on the outside of his pie. He had a happy day.

Perhaps the happest man in the prison today was Oscar Nelson, who was sent to prison nearly 23 years ago to serve a life sentence for murder. Oscar has been pardoned on the condition that he leave the country. He leaves for Sweden on Jan. 15.

Birthday at Stake in Shylock Deal Made When He Was Pressed for Money

By WILLIAM RANDOLF.
Copyright, 1922, by International News Service.

New York, Jan. 1.—The Duke of Leicester today faced the new year with the task of raising $2,000,000—cash—to save for himself his opulent birthday. He bartered for a figurative mess of pottage.

He is commonly called the "hereditary king" of leeches.

The task is said to be one of the strangest contracts ever made in modern times, reminiscent of Shylock's pound of flesh bond.

The descendant of a long line of Irish noblemen is seeking the money, he admitted today at his suite at the Titicaca Hotel, to "void the bond."

"I am not a business man. I am a duke," was his way of commenting on the transaction by which, a few years ago, he gave to the right to the vast family estate, worth $10,000,000, in return for £10,000 and a guarantee of $300 for life.

"Just a loan," is what he terms the strange contract.

Because he made the deal when hard pressed for money in his younger days, when he was Lord Fitzgibbon, third heir, a chess was invented in the contract, pressing him to buy back his interests for £10,000 within ten years.

As it happened, the present Duke's eldest brother, always an invalid, died, and Lord Fitzgibbon, second brother, who would have succeeded him, was killed in the war, leaving the title passed to Lord Edward.

He was then, according to report, that this wife, once called the most beautiful Gaiety Girl when she was May Ellender, persuaded him to seek to recover a lost fortune, consisting of three castles, vast lands and rich heirlooms with their appurtenances.

Accordingly the Duke is said to have suffered Sir Henry Jekyll, Dowry member of Parliament, 1870-1880, but Sir Henry stood upon his bond and demanded the full sum. The income from the estate figures at a quarter of a million a year.

RADIO BROADCASTS SMITH'S INAUGURAL

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Alfred E. Smith of New York for a second time was inaugurated governor today.

The ceremonies in the capitol followed by Chamber at the capitol followed a military and civic parade.

The Right Rev. Edmund P. Gibbons, Roman Catholic Bishop of Albany, delivered the invocation. Following Governor Miller, briefly, Secretary Hamilton administered the oath of office to Governor Smith and the boom of cannon in Capitol Park heralded the inauguration of the new executive.

After the delivery by Governor Smith of a brief inaugural address the ceremonies ended with a benediction by Bishop Richard Nelson of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Albany.

For the first time the radio broadcasted the exercises to thousands of households, and amplifiers in the Senate Chamber and in Capitol Park carried the tolling to vast throngs.

terest our practical, amateur world statesmen with their "conversations." "THE MEN WHO ARE DEVOTING THEIR INGENUITY TO DEVISING NEW TORTURES FOR GERMANY ARE PREPARING NEW TORTURES FOR THEIR OWN AND THEIR NEIGHBORS' CHILDREN."

THAT is a warning to France that to persist in wrecking and ruining Germany now will mean Germany and Russia united in attack on western Europe, with destruction certain for the coaquos of yesterday.

How quickly the world turns upside down, and sides change! Here is Lloyd George, without whose genius the defeat of Germany would have been impossible, appearing as Germany's defender against excessive exactions.

THE LESS "conversing" this nation does with Europe the more it attends to American affairs, and the more it tends to European affairs, the better for America. You will have a better year if you can persuade your servants to confine their "conversations" to American affairs, and obey the orders received at the last national election.

THERE IS PLENTY of work to be done here, and Attorney-General Daugherty sets a good example in getting at it. This nation was shamelessly and thoroughly robbed in war by eminently respectable patriots, and Daugherty is reaching out for a few of them.

He ought not to miss the biggest of all, not yet mentioned in public, appearing as Germany's defender against excessive exactions, appearing as Germany's defender against excessive exactions.

the Misses Elizabeth Bright, Josephine Cogswell, Anne R. Brown, Katherine Richardson, Mrs. Dorothy Ger, and Mrs. Robert E. Gross. Their gowns were of old blue velvet with silver hair, large-buffed hats of old blue velvet and silver lace.

SPEAKING of bridesmaids' gowns—it was quite a coincidence that the frocks worn by the attendants at the Press-Bureau wedding upstate the same afternoon should have been of the same color combination. However, in the afternoon ceremony, the bridesmaids' gowns were of georgette crepe, also with touches of silver, while the lace hats boasted sweeping plumes of silver gray. Both at the weddings, I believe, the attendants carried yellow roses.

It was really a pleasure to watch the former Elizabeth Higginson Bowditch's eyes twinkle as she came down the aisle upon the arm of her beaming hubby, James Randall Spicer.

The bride—she is slender, of medium height, and has soft chestnut brown hair—wore a gown of white broadcloth, accented on simple lines, her collar veiled caught with orange blossoms. Her father, Frederic C. Bowditch of Brookline, officiated at the altar, the ceremony taking place in the First Parish Church of Brookline.

Antia Bowditch, one of the season's debutantes, was maid of honor, the other attendants including the Misses Margaret T. Bowditch, another sister, Miss Sally Bowditch, also a debutante, and a cousin, Miss Vera Laitrop, Miss Elizabeth Smith and Miss Mary. Married of Portland, Me.

It is understood that the young couple are to have a tiny house of their own at No. 125 Garden road, Brookline, where they will be "at home" after April 1. Mr. Spicer, by the way, is the son of Mrs. Edward A. Fraser of Berkeley, Cal. Another non-Bostonian has captured a Boston girl.

I THOUGHT they weren't going to smile even the merest shadow of smile, but they did—just as they were half way down the aisle after the Rev. Mr. Park had pronounced them man and wife. I mean the Bentley Wirt Warrens, Jr. who were married Saturday noon in the First Church, at Berkeley and Marlboro streets.

They certainly made an attractive couple. For the former Dorothy Thorndike is a slender brunette, while her husband is blonde. No wonder Albert Thorndike made a proud papa as he escorted his youngest daughter to the altar, for the latter looked very lovely in her gown of old blue velvet, with its long, square train. The coronet veil of rare lace—worn, I believe, by the bride's grandmother—was caught with a wreath of orange blossoms, and set off most effectively the bride's black hair.

Miss Rosanna Thorndike, who attended her sister as maid of honor, wore a draped gown of old rose velvet, her hat of the same material, combined with silver lace. She has the same brunoise coloring as her sister, but is taller and of a more Juno-esque type.

The bridesmaids group included

NEW KIDNAPING LEAD TO MER ROUGE LANE

Boston, Jan. 1.—The kidnaping of Harold L. Teegston, who was expected to testify for the State in the Mer Rouge investigation, stirred agents of the Department of Justice to renewed activity today.

Teegston was a time-keeper in a carbon plant at Spyker, four miles south of here.

Sheriff Carpenter, returned to Boston after an investigation of the kidnaping, said today he was informed that at midnight Friday Teegston was called from his quarters in a bungalow by men in automobiles who drove away in the darkness with him. The sheriff said he was told there were sixteen men in the party and that they occupied cars from which the license tags had been removed.

PROBE OTHER OUTRAGES.
J. Burnett, first person arrested in the Mer Rouge investigation, and who was held in Boston Jail under military guard on a charge of murder, was employed at the carbon plant of Spyker.

Department of Justice agents are said to have questioned Teegston prior to the alleged kidnapping. With the public hearing near at hand, State officials will labor over the mass of evidence gathered by State and Federal investigation during the last four months.

It was said that testimony concerning denials of kidnapping, made by the American press, concerning alleged arrangements for Italian loans in the United States of America.

"Certain business matters having redacted themselves with authority, the Italian embassy emphatically repudiated any such persons as their statements, which are entirely uncorroborated and devoid of any authority in the matter."

It was declared the hearing would result in a strict investigation of other crimes laid at the door of masked bands in other Louisiana parishes.

Dog Bite Fatal

JOHN H. CURRIER.

John H. Currier of No. 9 Sachem street, Revere, thirteen-year-old son of John Currier, well-known city councillor of Revere, died at the Boston City Hospital, where he was taken on Friday when it was found he had been infected by a dog bite received last September and was suffering from hydrophobia.

The boy was bitten last Fall near his home by a dog owned by a Mr. Smith of No. 527 Revere street.

The boy seemed to be in good health until last Thursday when he complained of a numb feeling throughout his system. That night Dr. McGraves of Revere was called in and he ordered the boy to the hospital, holding little hope for recovery.

FIND BROOKLINE JANITOR HALF CONSCIOUS

Found semi-conscious in the boiler room in the basement of the building at Commonwealth avenue and Winslow road, Brookline, a man believed to be James Murphy, janitor of the building, who removed the boiler from the station and later the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

The man was unable to give any explanation of his condition. The police say they found a bottle containing a quantity of a concoction resembling ether and believe the man may have taken some of it.

The man was found by Patrolman Schuler of the Brookline police after he went into the building to investigate the appearance of steam coming out.

QUIET NEW YEAR'S DAY AT WHITE HOUSE

Young Mr. Roosevelt, with unusual simplicity and unpretentiousness, new year was welcomed at the White House today. It was with great personal regret to Mrs. Harding that because of his health, she was forced to call off the usual formal ceremonies. Last year, when more than 5,000 persons stood in line for hours, having bitter cold weather, Mrs. Harding's first reception was a very informal success. Today, upon strictest command from her physicians, she was forced to pass the day quietly.

Prices called on Smith & Company's sale of extra beef in Boston the week ending Saturday last, ranged from 12 cents to 14 cents per pound, with 12 1/2 cents per pound, about.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA PLAYS PENN STATE

By MARK KELLY.

Final Intersections Pasadena, Calif. — East meets West today in the third and final intersection of the Pacific Coast has gathered these busy holiday.

Rose Bowl is the spot: Penn State and University of Southern California the teams. 'Fair skies and friendly sunshine are promises for the game which is really the most representative of the trio the East and West have engaged in this fortnight.

The Nitty Nitty Lions from the fastnesses of the Alleganese and the Trojan horde from Los Angeles go to grips an even money proposition. The strength of the Nittany Lion is known, tested and found not perfect but powerful enough to make predictions against them risky.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

BY NICK FLATLEY

THE BASEBALL FAN

We stood for a lot of tough stuff in the past,
And never cowered a row.
We saw our stars go; our teams come to woe,
And sat back and waited for more.
But now that is over, and we must be shown
That promise means more than bluff.
If our teams start to climb—and can do it in time
The New Year may not be so rough.

THE OWNER

We clutched all the dollars that came to the gate
And put them away in the sock.
To "get" was our habit. An offer? Why, grab it!
Nor minded the fan's rabid knock.
But all that is changed now, and it's all the same.
We would have to do something this year.
The gang's on our neck, and they mean it, by heck,
Which assures us a different New Year.

THE GOLFER

The brassie shot, and drove, and putt
Are all right in their place.
It makes one thrill to whack the pill
The million miles through the space.
But one should play with club and ball
And cancel all the chatter.
Go out and walk, but stop the talk!
What's ended doesn't matter.

THE BOXER

The give and take of padded ring
Add plaster to the roll.
The sturdy sock, the billed shoe, the cap
Make up a juicy volume.
But why not do the fighting
When the starting bell rings out?
And "can" the stuff, the advantage guff,
That no one cares about.

TO THE GANG

THOUGH the joists of fate may have shaken you to pieces,
Or shaken you down, so to speak,
Just hold up your head, and don't let it be said
That you are discouraged or weak.
For we always come brighter and braver in the dark.

If you doubt it, just search and you'll see.
Step forth with a smile, and, you'll see.
You'll be happy, just take it from me.

LABOR CONFIDENT, 27 HORSES EATEN
SAYS GOMPERS, 27 HORSES EATEN

By SAMUEL GOMPERS.

Washington, Jan. 1.—Labor has cause to rejoice upon the threshold of this new year.

Labor has vindicated once more the maxim of truth crushed to earth will rise again.

Labor has come out of the valleys; today its hosts are camped upon the hills.

Labor looks forward with confidence and courage to the future.

Labor, under the banner of trade unionism, organized, knit together in federations and finally one great federation, knows now its own invincibility.

Labor knows today its own courage, its own self-restraint, its own grand philosophy, the eternal truth and righteousness of its cause.

Twenty horses were suffocated and another horse that escaped was so badly burned that he had to be shot, as a result of a fire of unknown origin that destroyed the one and a half story wooden stable owned by J. S. Palmer, owner of Gilman's Express, in the rear of No. 254 Elm street, West Somerville, today.

Two alarms were sounded and assistance was sent over from Cambridge. Several wooden tenement houses in the rear of the barn, the Chicago and Powers avenue were saved by the fire hose. The damage is estimated at $5,000.

All of which hasn't a great deal to do with the boxing or wrestling. Which is what we are supposed to write about. But the boys will know what off the front lawn, and incidentally to assist in keeping the boys from getting bored, here is a couple of hundred thousand or so in the pockets of the boys. There are no competitors, in the strict meaning of that word.

There is a fellow named boxing this year. There will also be the usual array of high class talent and a few of the boys will be in the house.

The Arena A. C. stand most of the big money during the week, and intends to keep right on putting over the boys.

But there will be competition.

The Armory A. C. which has been the mainstay of the boys at the Grand Opera House, will wait in to Mechanic Building any time it gets a big crowd.

The Faneuil A. C. is down, but not yet. Johnny Mahony may be responsible for the boys, and the management sound.

Colonel John H. H. of the Commonwealth, who intends to remain active until the weather gets a little better, will be with the boys again.

Of course we will see the champion.

Puncho Panchito Villa and Frankie Mahon show at the Arena A. C. on the 15th.

Friends of the Lynn Star have rallied to his support and have circulated a petition requesting the athletic council to grant Harris a year of grace. The Lynn youth baseball association has agreed to North Shore sporting events for three years.

NEW KANE FURNITURE STORE OPENS

AT NO. 740 WASHINGTON ST.
The formal opening tomorrow of the new Kane Furniture store in Boston marks a new departure of an organization which has long had the confidence of New Englanders.

KANE OPENS HUB STORE TO SELL FURNITURE

With the coming of the New Year, a new furniture store opens in Boston, Tuesday, January 2. The formal opening announcement has been made, and the doors will be open on Tuesday from one o'clock to five-thirty, and in order to permit those who are unable to attend during these business hours to see this magnificent furniture store, the formal opening continues from six-thirty to nine p. m. There will be music and free souvenirs for all.

For many years, this organization has been trying to find a proper location in Boston. The opportunity came last Summer, and Mr. Harry Kane, president of the Kane Furniture Company, negotiated the deal, which resulted in the Kane Furniture Company occupying the entire building at No. 740 Washington street, corner of Harvard street. This splendid location is in the heart of the furniture district, and in conjunction with the store occupies five immense floors and basement.

The Kane Furniture Company is a highly specialized organization. Mr. Harry Kane is president and Mr. M. W. Miles is treasurer. Mr. Miles has charge of the Providence end of the business. Associated with Mr. Harry Kane and Mr. M. W. Miles is Mr. John W. Kane, who has charge of the Woonsocket branch of the Kane Furniture chain of stores.

Every piece of furniture, every rug in fact, every item of merchandise in this new Boston store is brand new, assembled from the best manufacturers in America. On the first floor, the living room furniture is on exhibition, on the second floor, living room furniture with rugs, on the third floor, chamber furniture is shown, on the fourth floor, dining room pieces are on exhibition, on the fifth floor, an annex, dining room suites, brass beds, bedding, etc. In the basement are the stove, refrigerator, wash, furniture, etc. Thousands of electric lamps on all floors and throughout the window displays add additional charm and beauty to the assemblage covering all latest style furniture.

3 DEAD, 1 DYING IN SMASH-UP IN TEXAS
Arlington, Tex., Jan. 1.—Four persons were killed outright, one is dying and three others were seriously injured when an automobile in which seven young men were riding collided with a gravel truck near here today.

PADEREWSKI IN RECITAL AT SYMPHONY

Once more the magic of the personality and playing of Jan Paderewski had the music lovers of Boston standing three deep for the entire length of Symphony Hall. This was the second recital that Mr. Paderewski has given here since his return to this country a short time ago. He still seems supreme as a box-office attraction.

The program was much the same as he is wont to play. That is to say, classics from beginning to end. This time there was only one interpolation to break the thread and that was a "Nocturne" by Paderewski, and many people would consider that a classic. Probably nobody on the concert stage today but the artist in question would essay what he did and that is to put two sonatas on the same program in the position that he chose for them—one immediately following the other. That it was a decided and unnecessary tax on his listeners goes without saying.

The Chopin group was the peak of the afternoon. Paderewski, of the best known of modern musicians, a wit and a satirist, and it was again emphatically proven that his audience would rather hear the Polish genius in Chopin than anything else he plays for them.

As a fitting climax to the recital came the "Liszt-Hungarian Rhapsody," which was simply tremendous, and carried the audience to its feet.

Compare this with 124 million shares in 1921 and 118 million in 1920.

With bond transactions amounting to about $375,000,000, the total may be conservatively termed a "billion dollar business."

Plan Now for New Year and Become an Investor

PLAN your accounts as you can and start with a new plan for the New Year. Make up your mind that you are going to invest more often and more wisely. Don't content yourself with a general inclination and a broad, sweeping gesture. Lay down to facts and build your plans on them.

We all look upon the American standard of living as an excellent thing, but the trouble with most of us is that we surpass the standard in luxury. That too luxurious mode of living the individual can only in his own life. He can become as severe as himself and his bookkeeping as an expert accountant and as profitable in his plans of expenditure as a savings bank president.

You can make reckoning now of your luxury expenses of 1922. Write out the items and find your total. Then place beside that total the sum you have put into securities. Subtract from your surplus total the amount you put into promotion stocks and other securities. You are now in a position to make a plan for 1923.

You can be generous with yourself. Don't confine your planned expenditures to bare necessities, when you can afford luxuries and have paid for them. But first in moderation. Set aside an equally generous part of your luxury account for investment purposes. Whether that is $100, $200 or $1,000, you can add just that much to your investment fund in the stock year.

You will probably be living near to the American standard of living with but little more of it than you will be adding to your chances of living according to the American standard of living when old age and lack of earning power creep upon you. Don't forget that a sacrifice of luxury now may mean an opportunity for habitual luxuries later on. Now is the time to plan and every day that the plan is not "happened" to you; you have to produce it by your own action.

pay of railroad clerks, signalmen and stationery clerks. The shopkeepers' strike was a tactical move and the board announced leaders of the unions to appear before them. The most recent preparation for the federal reserve banks out of date.

NO HARD TIMES COMING, SAYS EDGERTON

By JOHN E. EDGERTON, President National Association of Manufacturers.

(Copyright, 1923, by Commercial News Service)

New York, Jan. 1.—In nearly every section of the country there are physical evidences that business is steadily growing better; that industries, as a rule, are running smoothly and are developing from day to day along lines that mean continued and stable production; that employees on the whole are fairly contented and are receiving increased volumes of wages in proportion to the increased volumes of production; that wholesalers, as a general rule, have been doing a steady business, although not a noticeably increased business, and that retailers in circumstances that are far safer than at any time within the last twelve months.

Fundamentally and basically there is nothing wrong with our business or our country, physically there is something wrong which should be corrected and could be corrected very easily.

I find, here and there, the same spirit of pessimism and timidity over business that was apparent a year ago, when so many men were saying that business was in a very bad way. It is very much as if a man were to say to a friend, "I am afraid there are no hard times coming to us any more."

A large number of business men are being their results on way days and not on pre-war days. Our normal, normal days. We need a little more deflation from the artificial prices that we all became so used to during the war. We need an end of hard work and the elimination of the drone. We must accept with more complacency the natural order of industry. As soon as we do that we will be in a most favorable position of the business internationally.

OCTOBER.—Business made good recovery from the effects of the coal and rail strikes. These forces were felt, however, particularly in the line of commodities. The improvement was more of a temporary nature.

NOVEMBER.—Business getting back to 1922 levels. The Department of Commerce reported that industries were operating at high level. The automobile production for the year was estimated at 2,400,000.

DECEMBER.—Business in the closing month of the year. All phases considered, was perhaps the best of any month in 1922. The total volume of business was estimated at 2,400,000.

Medbury Says It's Easy to Do Nothing, but Hard to Do It Well

By John P. Medbury

THE average clerk in the average office does not to some day be the boss. No man is really a success until he can sit in his office and have his secretary tell everybody he's out.

HE can't be at the top of his profession until he sits back in his chair and talks to himself and then has the phone girl announce that he is in an important conference.

IF a clerk wants to succeed he must imitate the boss, but as soon as he starts doing it he usually gets fired for loafing.

IT'S easy to do nothing, but it's hard to do it well.

SOME firms pay a man $25,000 a year for smoking expensive cigars and being out to lunch when anybody wants to see him.

THESE fellows are easy to see, but hard to find.

THEY'll spend three hours in a conference every day trying to think of some way to cut the clerk's lunch hour in half.

THEY may be reducing his salary so he won't be able to eat so much.

A BOSS has to have enough brains to do the work in the office, but most of them have brains enough to get somebody else to do it for them.

THE average employer gets to work at ten and leaves at four. A lot of them would save time by going home right from lunch.

OF course a lot of New York business men get in the morning by San Francisco time.

ONE well known scientist says that no matter what line you enter, you must start at the bottom and work up. Maybe he's right, but what about grade diggers?

THESE are a lot of men who are not making ten or fifteen thousand a year.

THE discourteous treatment given elderly people by the majority of persons is surprising and distressing.

We are all going toward that age when the younger generation will have as much cause to be annoyed by our actions as we have to be annoyed by the actions of old people today.

Why not more sympathy and kindness shown toward the elderly?

Perhaps they have but few more years to live and why should not those who are of younger years make the time as happy and comfortable as possible.

MOSCOW, Russia.—Former Lenin today ordered that all heads of Russia be shaved off. He said he was tired of seeing Russia represented as a bearded man in all cartoons, and was very weary of hearing jokes about Russian whiskers.

HIS HATED RIVAL

How He Nearly Wrecked the Engagement of Annetta and Made Her Lover Suffer the Pangs of Jealousy

By Lily Wandel

"I'll very first time he called on Annetta he wondered if she was flattered by his attention. Annetta was calm, sweet and unassuming. He had been very popular, but then that expression he preferred he called 'wicked'."

Some people who had known Barry well had known him as "Barry the Wicked" and "Barry the Wicked" was the name that he was attracted by Annetta, but then, was it not the natural thing in the world after the forgiveness of the orchids that he should choose a modest, little violet from home?

He was positive when he kissed her the first time that Annetta had never been kissed before by a lover, and that alone made him treasure her. He was humble in his thankfulness of having won Annetta, and then came a rather rude awakening. Annetta was the same of Everett once or twice, but not without a soft, reverent glow. He never questioned him, he was silent.

Tonight he was going to ask her about Everett, for he had read him innocently more than he would have confessed.

"Maine Delella was here today," announced Annetta sweetly when he arrived, and Barry felt a queer sinking sensation. What if Maine had been telling a lot of stuff—well, he could explain. Annetta had not to ask, he had been going to ask her concerning Everett.

Rather Startling

They sat out in the swing, the evening air perfumed by a wealth of moon-orange blossoms and daffodils. Barry asked Annetta concerning Everett. She was startled by her sudden exclamation.

"Barry, what a pity you do not know my dear friend," she said. "I wish I had, darling," fervently. "I wish you could have shared with me all the joys I shared with Everett." The softest smile came to her face. "I love you dear, but that something you missed—that I gave to Everett—that was perfectly safe, close and intimate, when I had no one else I was not lonely. I could depend upon him."

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

BE SURE TO READ THEM TO CHILDREN

"Oh, dear!" Linda sighed as she looked at the threatening clouds above her. "If we don't take a walk through the woods and see how it's going to rain and I can't go," and her face puckered up in a big frown.

"My goodness!" laughed a merry voice. "Here you're crying because it's going to rain and I'm laughing. Linda turned first one way, then the other, and couldn't find the owner of the tiny voice.

"Here I am!" laughed the tiny voice again. "Right here, not a step from your very eyes. Can't you see me?"

"I can hear you," laughed Linda. "But I can't see you. Where are you, anyway?"

"Well if you can't see me, I'll have to make myself known. I'm the keeper of the Marigold flower castle—right here by the fence post."

Linda looked toward the fence post, and sure enough, sitting on the centre of the Marigold castle, was a dear little elf.

Linda ran over and shook his hand. "Oh, Mr. Elf Keeper, I'm so glad to see you," she laughed brightly. "But say, hadn't you better close up your castle doors before it begins to rain?"

"Why, no!" laughed the tiny keeper. "The doors are closed, but they are so close up your castle doors before it begins to rain?"

"Why, no!" laughed the tiny keeper. "The doors are closed, but they are so close up your castle doors before it begins to rain?"

Good Resolutions

DRAWN BY POPINI

WHAT a pretty puzzle the coming of the New Year presents to those folks in that perplexing matter of resolutions! There's the dressing necessity to add oneself to the thought that there really is need of about facing in any thing.

There's also that strange hesitation each person feels in deciding just which fault—or of fact—on which to specialize. For the really efficient—of course, I don't mean efficient because of long practice, no indeed, no—'resolutions' knows there's no use in attempting to banish all her faults at once. It's not wholesome, in her heart. But when there is one who whippers in a shell-like ear.

What? Well, there's that old little way of treating even the very best of girl friends when a man—No, no, not that!

"All right, then," is there the suspicion of a chuckle in the very words. "Why not turn over a new leaf?—you know, you really do hate to see any other girl have around her more men."

"Not even that!" There's no mistaking the chuckle now. "What you say to a bit more audacious, for instance, in the length of your skirt—Ab, pardon me, you have gone in for the sweep-theatre skirt, haven't you? But there, there still is the matter of greater things."

"What's that, Ab, THAT'S the fundamental fault, eh? Sure, I know," says you may have noticed that everything I suggested had something to do with a man, but, say, I'm double-doubt glad that you've mentioned it of your own accord. Go to it, m'dear!

"Swish-swish" was the sound. "I'm off off off the table of your heart, all save one—THE one. What a GOOD resolution! He! The old who 'just lives' to win—swish his best riding the beach; the boy who adores riding like lightning—but ride his best on your roller skating chair; the nifty sailmaker whose best breeze is his own wind; the caller with the masculine macedo and the box of chocolates and the adirondack-adirondack eye—of course, you wouldn't, wouldn't, couldn't choose one of them. No, lady—no, no, no! You'll make your OWN selection? W-E-L-L, that's a pretty good resolution in itself, my dear! And a happy New Year to YOU!"

If This Is Your Birthday

YOURS is a character of happy purpose. You are what is known as a practical idealist. Today is one of good omens for important decisions. Do not hesitate to enter into agreements and contracts. Personal resolves made this day will be attended with indifferent success.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Ralph Lacey, After the Dinner at the Club, Tells Anne It is a Business Meal and He is Ready to Do Anything for Her

By Ann Lisle

MR. LACEY strolled out of the large office while I dotted my hat and coat. His instinctive courtesy as a d gentleman made me think of Tony, his boyish camaraderie of Neal. I was perfectly content to be so comfortable in this strange situation into which my love for Jim had forced me. Yet there was one thing that had to be clarified between me and a good deal of my life. I felt that it might be more delicate to have it spoken, but I knew that our honest friendship would respond the better if I ignored diplomacy and spoke frankly. But I needed the reviving effect of little hot food before I could risk anything more than casual notice.

"Virtually none," I said. "Sound good," said Mr. Lacey, when we had talked for my chosen restaurant, and were seated at a choice white table.

"It does. Hot and comforting," I agreed.

The Menu

"Then rare roast beef, but extra juicy, with baked potatoes and grilled tomatoes. Endive with rougette dressing—or do you like a plain dressing better?" he questioned, coloring with a crisp precision which the waiter to follow eagerly.

"Rougette, please, and the coffee with it."

"No awakes!" he asked with a boyish disappointment which made me feel it was a second Neal who sat opposite me.

"Do you want one so much?" I smiled.

"I'd like you to have some delicious omelette. These cunning, was panned in a pan. I don't know what it is, but it's good for your nerves," he said with comical emphasis.

"That's a party dinner," protested Mr. Lacey. "Here is a fine new client who is about to hand me a large order. Why shouldn't I be clever enough to get her all I can?"

"The sort of man you should select," W-E-L-L, that's a pretty good resolution in itself, my dear! And a happy New Year to YOU!"

TELL THIS AT DINNER

Mr. Green had quite a reputation in the suburb which he honored with his abiding presence. It is to be feared, however, that it was not a particularly good reputation. In fact, one house had been definitely decided to refuse to have him as a guest.

One day he was invited to an "At Home," and, as usual, he was sent away to his hostess's long after the other guests had departed.

"Well, I must be going," he remarked at length.

"Yes, I really must go," said Greene once more. "But really, believe me, I do so enjoy a little chat with you. Do you know I had quite a headache when I came, but now I've entirely lost it."

"Oh, it isn't lost," replied the suffering lady. "I've got it now!"

"Yes, I really must go," said Greene once more. "But really, believe me, I do so enjoy a little chat with you. Do you know I had quite a headache when I came, but now I've entirely lost it."

APPEARANCE AT MEALS

BEGIN TRAINING IN THE HOME

By Loretta C. Lynch

An Authority on All Manners of Personal Appearance

THE value of personal appearance in the business world is capitalized not only by various clothing firms but likewise by those whose job it is to sell goods of various types—wigs, hair-dressers, bookbinders and the like. Why not begin this training in appreciation of a well-groomed personal appearance in the home? Why not make it a point that each member of the family shall come to the table looking his or her best?

The mother of six hungry youngsters told me that so lately she was handicapped by her lack of personal appearance when she entered the business world, that she suffered in a similar manner. And she made it a rule that at the end of a day when all ate together, she would signal the children to come up before bedtime so that they might have plenty of time to prepare.

And yet, there were just ordinary children, who did not like cleanliness, who did not like to wash their faces, who did not like to wash their hands, who did not like to wash their hair, who did not like to wash their feet, who did not like to wash their clothes, who did not like to wash their bodies, who did not like to wash their souls.

But each child washed face, neck, hands as the mother took the time to teach them. The older children, being the more responsible, their teeth and combs and brushed their hair. Shows were brushed. Clothing if fairly presentable was smoothed into place. Mother always looked trim at table.

Neither was a hairnet to keep stray locks in place. This had a loose-fitting overall apron (quaint).
